

BareTone

Pigment Repair Elbow & Knee Serum

Campaign concept

Care Where Skin Works Hardest.

A targeted roll-on body serum for elbows and knees.

Product Overview

What makes BareTone different

Pigment Repair Elbow & Knee Serum

- Lightweight roll-on serum for darker, rougher-looking elbows and knees
- Designed for thicker, friction-prone areas that bend, lean, kneel, and move
- Cleaner and easier than thick creams, jars, or messy scrubs
- A body-care message centered on confidence, not shame

Product promise

Targeted care that fits into a daily routine.

Consumer Problem

A common concern that often gets handled with shame

The tension

Many people with deeper skin tones feel self-conscious about darker elbows and knees, especially when wearing outfits that show those areas.

The cause

These areas naturally have thicker skin and experience friction from bending, kneeling, leaning, clothing, and everyday movement.

The opportunity: make this feel normal, understood, and easy to care for.

Target Audience

Who the campaign is speaking to

Women of color, ages 18–30

- Interested in skincare, body care, beauty routines, and confidence
- May feel self-conscious about darker elbows and knees
- Wants affordable, easy products that feel made for their concerns
- Discovers beauty products on TikTok, Instagram, and YouTube

Secondary audience

Anyone dealing with rough, darker-looking elbows and knees from friction, dryness, or movement.

Key Insight

What the audience needs to feel

“I do not want to change my natural skin. I want body care that understands it.”

The campaign should feel like care — not correction.

It should educate people about friction and thicker skin while making them feel seen, not judged.

Positioning Statement

The strategic foundation of the campaign

TO

women of color ages 18–30 who want to care for darker, rougher-looking elbows and knees in a gentle way.

BARETONE IS THE

targeted roll-on body serum for friction-prone elbows and knees.

THAT

helps make body care feel easy, clean, and confidence-building.

THAT'S BECAUSE

it is designed for thicker skin, everyday friction, and convenient roll-on application.

Positioning keeps the campaign focused: specific target, clear category, meaningful benefit, believable reason.

Marketing Mix

The 4 P's supporting the launch

Product

Roll-on serum made specifically for elbows and knees.

Price

$18.99: affordable, but still more elevated than a basic lotion.

Placement

BareTone website, Amazon, TikTok Shop, Target, Ulta, CVS, Walgreens, Walmart.

Promotion

TikTok, Instagram Reels, YouTube Shorts, influencers, and in-store displays.

The mix makes BareTone feel accessible, discoverable, and easy to understand at first glance.

Campaign Concept

The creative idea

Care Where Skin Works Hardest.

Elbows and knees bend, lean, kneel, stretch, and rub against clothing or surfaces every day. BareTone gives those high-friction areas targeted care.

Tone: gentle, confident, educational, and empowering.

Ad Lob

A short-form social media ad

AD TITLE: EVERY BEND DESERVES CARE

1 Get ready

A woman starts her body-care routine.

2 Movement

Bending, leaning, kneeling, clothing friction.

3 Apply

Roll BareTone onto elbows and knees.

4 Close

Product shot + campaign line.

Final line: BareTone Pigment Repair Elbow & Knee Serum — Care Where Skin Works Hardest.

Why This Strategy Works

Clear, specific, and respectful

Specific

The product is made for one clear body-care concern: elbows and knees.

Convenient

The roll-on design makes application fast, clean, and easy to remember.

Respectful

The campaign talks about darker elbows and knees without shame-based language.

BareTone turns an overlooked body-care issue into a simple daily ritual.

